The image shows a web browser window with a standard menu bar (FILE, EDIT, VIEW, FAVORITES, TOOLS, HELP) and a toolbar with navigation icons (BACK, FORWARD, STOP, HOME, SEARCH, FAVORITES, MEDIA) and a search bar. The address bar is empty. The main content area displays a notification from Service A regarding a privacy policy change. The notification text states that Service A has changed its privacy policy and asks the user to review and accept the change. It lists a specific change: allowing Service A and participating sites to share the user's profile information with third parties. It also provides instructions on how to accept or reject the change and a warning that the account will be closed if the change is not accepted by July 31, 2003. There are checkboxes for 'DON'T NOTIFY ME ABOUT THIS AGAIN.' and buttons for 'ACCEPT' and 'REJECT'. The browser's status bar at the bottom shows 'DONE' and 'LOCAL INTRANET'.

The image shows a screenshot of a web browser window. The browser's address bar is empty, and the page title is "YOU ARE SIGNED IN AS USERNAME@A.COM". The main content area displays a message titled "PRIVACY POLICY CHANGE REJECTED". The message states that the user has rejected the revised privacy statement, and their account will be closed on July 31, 2003. It lists four consequences: deletion of profile information, inability to use the email address for sign-in, potential registration of a new account by others, and loss of access to participating sites and services. The user is prompted to click "ACCEPT" to accept the revised privacy statement or "REJECT" to confirm the rejection and close the account. The browser's status bar at the bottom shows "DONE" and "LOCAL INTRANET".
